The Economist Archives

The USA University Libraries have recently purchased The Economist Historical Archives from Gale. The Economist was founded in 1843, and it continues to publish commentary, reporting, and analysis on politics, business, science, culture, and technology.

The archive provides access to the full text of the journal from 1843-2015. While using The Economist back files, USA patrons can view full-color images, use multiple search indexes, and browse every issue.

The logo for The Economist, featuring the words "The Economist" in a white serif font on a red rectangular background.

Access to The Economist from 1988 to the present has been available, through other Gale databases, to USA faculty, staff, and students for years, and we hope that this expanded access to the archives is useful.

Who Will Write Our History Film and Discussion with Filmmaker Roberta Grossman

Together with community partners, the McCall Library will present this documentary film on the hidden archive of the Warsaw Ghetto and the group of people who created it. Their weapons of resistance were pen and paper. Watch the film online (link to come) then join the conversation Thursday, October 15 at 6 pm with Roberta Grossman. Register in advance for this important event.

Register at <https://southalabama.zoom.us/meeting/register/tJULf--uqD4pHtLV9RNLfz-obaXcjnxvVPL1>

A link to view the film online will be publicized the week of October 12. Contact dgurt@southalabama.edu with any questions.
