From the Editor

This will be my final issue as the Editor-in-Chief of Alabama Libraries, as I am stepping down from this position to allow more time for changing job responsibilities. While overseeing the re-emergence of this publication, I have enjoyed the opportunity to work with authors, reviewers, the Digital Commons platform, the University of South Alabama, and the Executive Council of the Alabama Library Association. I am grateful for the wisdom and experience I have gained while doing the important work of supporting the research endeavors of professionals in our state.

The last few years have been an exciting time of transformation for this journal. We've transitioned from a paper publication in select libraries to one whose digital format is safely collected in JagWorks, the institutional repository of the University of South Alabama. We've become an Open Access journal whose submissions undergo peer review, thanks to the hard work of our current Editorial Board. We are making every effort to provide a better reading experience for professionals in librarianship throughout the state, and I look forward to seeing where the future takes Alabama Libraries.

Thank You,

Jessica E. Platt,
Editor-in-Chief, 2019-2023
